MD Training

The Department of Family and Community Medicine ensures that all graduates from the University of Iowa Carver College of Medicine students receive a well-rounded education to help them succeed in whatever specialty they may choose. All CCOM medical students complete a required clerkship in Family and Community Medicine during their core year. The department also offers a multitude of advanced electives for students interested in primary care as well as select opportunities for visiting medical students. Advanced elective rotations provide students with opportunities to engage with diverse Iowa communities through work in affiliated hospitals, connected facilities, and clerkships with selected family physicians across the state, as well as within the University of Iowa Health Care family medicine department and clinics. Students also have the opportunity for independent study during their advanced clerkships.
