

Physical Rehabilitation Science, PhD

Financial Support

Individuals are typically only admitted to the program if funding is available to cover tuition, fees, and an assistantship to conduct research and teaching. A number of assistantships are available for PhD students. Faculty advisors provide guidance for students seeking external scholarship support through foundations and federal programs that support PhD training.