The French Courses (French and Italian) (FREN) section provides a list of courses offered, including details on course content, prerequisites, and credit hours. The courses are designed to cover a range of topics from elementary French to advanced study in French-speaking cultures and literature. For instance, FREN:1000 First-Year Seminar offers a small discussion class taught by a faculty member with topics chosen by the instructor, possibly including outside activities such as films, lectures, performances, and guest speakers. The course is intended for students with no knowledge of French and requires English proficiency.

Some courses focus on specific aspects of French culture, such as FREN:1002 Elementary French II, which builds on FREN:1001 and includes a review of basic grammar structures and the development of pronunciation skills. Other courses, like FREN:1006 Global Sports and National Cultures, explore the relationship between sports and national identities, including the Olympics, national teams, and various sports practices across the world.

Advanced courses, such as FREN:1600 French and Francophone Cultural Activities, emphasize the cultural role of French and Francophone events, ensuring the reader has a broad understanding of the French-speaking world, including literature, film, and music.
