

Dental Public Health, MS

Requirements

The Master of Science program in dental public health requires 40 s.h. of coursework and is designed to be completed in two academic years of full-time study. Students must maintain a cumulative grade-point average of at least 3.00 to earn the degree.

The program prepares dentists and dental hygienists to be specialists in dental public health. It emphasizes research and requires a research project culminating in the completion and defense of a thesis. Successful dentist graduates meet the educational requirements for eligibility to take the certifying examination of the American Board of Dental Public Health.
