

Psychological and Quantitative Foundations, PhD

School Psychology

The Doctor of Philosophy program in psychological and quantitative foundations with a school psychology subprogram requires a minimum of 108 s.h. of graduate credit. Students are expected to maintain a UI cumulative grade-point average (GPA) of at least 3.00.

The primary mission of the school psychology program is to train health service psychologists to be outstanding ethical and multiculturally competent scientist-practitioners who promote psychology as a profession and science for the betterment of the human condition. As such, the program places significant emphasis on instilling attitudes and skills that are necessary for becoming critical consumers of research, active disseminators of research, and valuable contributors to the scientific foundations of the field. Students must show appropriate levels of emotional balance and interpersonal skills, and act within the American Psychological Association's Ethical Principles of Psychologists and Code of Conduct.

Graduates from the school psychology program obtain positions as school service providers, private practitioners, faculty members, and psychologists in community mental health agencies, residential settings, and pediatric and psychiatric settings.

The APA Commission on Accreditation (APA-CoA) approved the school psychology program's intent to apply application and voted to provide public notice of the program's intent to seek accreditation effective April 2, 2022. Although currently not APA accredited, the doctoral program has developed its course offerings, sequence, research, and practical experiences to be in line with standards that are set forth by the Standards of Accreditation for Health Service Psychology. The doctoral-level school psychology program applied for accreditation on contingency in September 2023.

Students develop a plan of study in consultation with their academic advisors. Successful completion of the PRAXIS II—School Psychology subject test 5403 is required for program completion.

The PhD in psychological and quantitative foundations with a school psychology subprogram requires the following coursework.
