Financial Support

Students receive stipend and tuition support contingent on the continued availability of that funding. While the university makes every reasonable effort to ensure ongoing financial support, unforeseen changes in funding could affect continued support. Sources of support include departmental funds, training grants, research grants, and individual fellowships. Several offices on campus provide support for graduate trainees seeking to obtain prestigious fellowship awards to support their training. Continued financial support beyond the first year is also contingent on satisfactory academic performance and progress toward degree completion.
