

Speech and Hearing Science, Ph.D.

Learning Outcomes

Graduating Ph.D. students in speech pathology and audiology will demonstrate:

- critical thinking through reading, discussing, and writing about relevant scientific literature;
- competence in designing and conducting quality research, from concept to methodology, and through to data analysis and publication;
- competence in scientific writing;
- competence in developing and delivering quality oral research presentations; and
- competence in developing and delivering course material to undergraduate and graduate classes.