Speech and Hearing Science, Ph.D.

Learning Outcomes
Graduating Ph.D. students in speech pathology and audiology will demonstrate:

• critical thinking through reading, discussing, and writing about relevant scientific literature;
• competence in designing and conducting quality research, from concept to methodology, and through to data analysis and publication;
• competence in scientific writing;
• competence in developing and delivering quality oral research presentations; and
• competence in developing and delivering course material to undergraduate and graduate classes.