The Department of Management and Entrepreneurship has strengths in the areas of leadership, entrepreneurship, and human resource management. It provides evidence-based instruction that prepares students to pursue a career in human resource management, start their own business, or lead projects, teams, and organizations.

The department offers undergraduate majors in entrepreneurship and management, and the subprogram in management that leads to the PhD in business administration. Additionally, the Department of Management and Entrepreneurship contributes to the MBA program; see the Master of Business Administration Program in the catalog.
