

Urban Studies, Minor

The minor in urban studies is highly relevant to students interested in addressing emerging and persistent issues in cities of the 21st century, including climate change, environmental conservation, sustainable development, mobility and access, housing affordability, public health, and economic prosperity—each of which has local, urban, and regional dimensions.